The First Period spans the years before the screening of Émile Cohl's film Fantasmagorie in Paris, France. There is no 'animation' as such there, but the film still incorporates many features that look like what nowadays we would consider to be animation. We will call this period 'Before Fantasmagorie (0–1908)'.  The Second Period embraces the entire silent film era and ends with a specific date: 18 November 1928, the day of the public screening of Walt Disney's first 'talkie', the short film Steamboat Willie . We will call this period 'The Silent Pioneers (1908–1928)'.		Walter Robert Booth	23
